Stroke has a massive and sudden impact, and is the largest cause of complex adult disability in the UK.

Over half of the 1.2 million stroke survivors are dependent on others. Stroke is more prevalent than many think and a lot of the long-term effects of stroke can be hidden and can go unnoticed by those who care for them.

“A well-structured day with interactive exercises. [We] Got through a lot of information. I liked the way it was linked to our working experiences. Very skilled trainer!” - Feedback from the Stroke Fundamentals and Recovery Training course.

We work with stroke survivors and leading stroke experts in the design and review of all our training and education packages, to ensure they meet care needs.
All health and social care professionals will come across someone who has had a stroke. It is a complex condition and can leave stroke survivors with a range of complications, some of which can be hidden. Our training is designed to explain and explore the complexity and prevalence of stroke.

We believe it is essential that everyone who works with those affected by stroke give the best quality care and treatment. This is underpinned by the Care Act (2014), NICE guidelines and the Stroke Strategy (Department of Health 2007). Our courses are designed to help providers and individuals deliver person-centred care that addresses need.

We have education packages to suit all levels, this includes:
- Accredited and transferable qualifications
- Modular courses for groups or individuals
- Distance learning solutions
- Training for trainers – to enable cascade ‘Stroke Aware’ sessions

Our training officers are experts in stroke and use their experience and working knowledge to engage learners and make the courses interactive and relevant to their roles. We provide cost-effective training to groups in the workplace or to individuals at various locations around the UK.
